More about the course

This course offers comprehensive education on alloplastic graft materials and the scientific research behind them. The program begins with an introduction to these materials and strategies for optimizing bone regeneration results. Participants will explore various clinical cases such as sinus augmentation, buccal defects, cysts, apicectomies, peri-implantitis, and periodontitis. This will be followed by hands-on practice with jaw models, emphasizing a tenting technique to enhance stability. The course wraps up with a Q&A session, allowing attendees to clarify their understanding and seek further guidance.

ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Dr Peter Fairbairn

I have been the principal Dental Surgeon at the Scarsdale Dental Clinic since 1989, having been at the forefront of placing and restoring dental implants since 1991.

More about Peter

Dr Fairbairn is a global expert on bone regeneration, with extensive published research in materials and surgical protocols for bone repair without the use of donor animal and human products. These breakthroughs have not only enabled the patients to have their own host healing for the restoration of the bone needed for dental implants but have also provided patients with a more ethical alternative. He has been working on the protocols and developing new materials for the last 16 years, and is now invited globally to speak on the topic at conferences and universities in over 30 countries. In addition to holding the position of Director of Education of the ADI (UK), Dr Fairbairn is a past president of the London Dental Fellowship and has written many published articles and chapters in two best-selling books on Dentistry.
